GERMANY CLAIMS FRENCH DEFEAT

Berlin Dispatch Also Says Franco-British Left Wing Has Been Broken.

BOTH LOSE ENORMOUSLY

End of Aisne Battle in Sight—Antwerp Besiegers Will Go to Aid Von Kluck.

London, Oct. 10.—A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam says the German general staff has issued the following statement:

"The entire fortress of Antwerp, including all the forts, is in our possession." Copenhagen, Oct. 10.—Berlin dispatches state that the French attempt to outflank the German right wing may be considered definitely to have failed. The Germans are even now menacing the French and British left wing with outflanking movements.

Both Lose Heavily.

The French as well as the German losses during the last few days have been enormous. The French and British being unable to bring considerable reinforcements to this point, the Germans will surely succeed in breaking down resistance.

The end of the Aisne battle is expected next week.

Berlin (via Amsterdam), Oct. 10.—A statement issued by the war office states the flanking operations of the German troops in France had met with such steady success that the allies' left wing is in serious danger.

Says Offense Is Increasing.

"Our offensive is increasing in strength," says the statement, "and the enemy has suffered so tremendously in their attempts to arrest our advance and outflank us that they have been compelled to withdraw from several points about Arras."

"Though we have suffered heavily as well, we are in a position to re-enforce our lines, whereas the French and British commanders are unable to strengthen their forces to any extent."

"The successful termination of the siege of Antwerp will release the German forces that have been besieging that fortress. It can be stated that the decisive phase of the war in the western theater has been reached and the advantage is all ours."

"The situation in the east is unchanged."

A single German army division, consisting of 20,000 men, captured Antwerp, according to a statement issued.

SICK CHILDREN LOVE CASCARETS FOR THE BOWELS

Give "Candy Cathartic" for a Bad Cold, Sour Stomach, Constipation.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most of the ills of childhood are caused by a sour, disordered stomach, sluggish liver, and constipated bowels. They catch cold easily, become cross, listless, irritable, feverish, restless, tongue coated, don't eat or sleep well and need a gentle cleansing of the bowels—but don't try to force a nauseating dose of oil or castor oil on the little one's already sick stomach—it is cruel, needless, and old-fashioned.

Any child will gladly take Cascarets Candy Cathartic which act gently—never gripe or produce the slightest uneasiness—through cleansing the little one's system, sweeten the stomach, and put the liver and bowels in a pure, healthy condition.

Full directions for children and grown-ups in each package.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this gentle, thorough laxative which costs only 10 cents a box at any drug store—Ad.

ROOT, AND ROOT FOR WASHINGTON

That's to Be the Slogan for Every Resident of the Capital City.

ALL MUST GET BUSY

Business Men Realize the Benefit that Will Accrue if The Herald Campaign Is Successful.

R. P. Andrews, who went out of town just before President Roosevelt, of the Board of Trade, returned, was confident yesterday that his plan to attract tourists will be taken up without delay.

During his trip, Mr. Andrews told many friends of the campaign suggested by The Herald. Approval was shown by all. Mr. Andrews said, and in no case was there doubt that the plan can be carried out effectively and cheaply.

"The proposal to advertise the Capital as a tourist resort in magazines with a large national character, and by personal solicitation, has been referred to the committee on publicity, and a report on the question would come also within the scope of the joint conventions of the committee."

The joint conventions of the committee of the commercial organizations already has approved the plan. It was said in a statement of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

"The proposal to advertise the Capital as a tourist resort in magazines with a large national character, and by personal solicitation, has been referred to the committee on publicity, and a report on the question would come also within the scope of the joint conventions of the committee."

The campaign proposed by The Herald to advertise the attractions of Washington with the view of bringing tourists to the National Capital was formally inaugurated yesterday, when the heads of the three local commercial organizations got together and discussed ways and means.

Present were Cuno H. Rulph, president of the Board of Trade; William F. Gude, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and R. P. Andrews, president of the Retail Merchants' Association.

Many cities combine with the convention bureau a tourist department with most satisfactory results. Atlantic City's good work in this connection is a noteworthy example.

The suggestion has been made by members of the committee that Mr. Andrews, who suggested the campaign to have a tourists' bureau, be made chairman. Mr. Andrews, in spite of his absence from the city during most of this, the first week of the campaign, has done much to further the work of the committee, both by action and word.

Mr. Andrews received enthusiastically the news that Mrs. John B. Henderson has volunteered to help the campaign, and that she will be glad to help the committee in any way. Among the many who have offered to co-operate are C. J. Gockeler, secretary of the Board of Trade; Thomas Grant, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and Charles J. Columbus, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association.

About a year ago, when he started on the invention, he went to an aquarium, where the attendants lifted from the tanks many species of fish. These the inventor held in his hand as long as possible without injuring them, studying the action of their gills as they gasped for breath.

All his experiments have been based on what he learned in this study.

'MOVIE' EPISODE STIRS MARSHALL

Vice President, Rebuked for Breaking Rules, Reads Riot Act.

OVERMAN GETS 'CALLING'

"This Is One Instance in Which I'm Not a Football to Be Kicked Around," Marshall Thunders.

There was a commotion in the Senate yesterday over the moving picture episode of Friday, in which Vice President Marshall, the Chairman of the Senate, several Senators and the pages posed for a moving picture film. Senator Overman, chairman of the Committee on Rules, brought the matter to the attention of the Senate shortly after it met, by asking that the rule of the Senate governing the control of the Senate chamber be read. Following the reading, Senator Overman said:

"There has been some criticism made of the fact that the Senate chamber was opened when the Senate was not in session, and motion pictures taken in the chamber. I want to say for the Committee on Rules that no consent was given by that committee for that performance."

Incident Sets Precedent.

The reading of the rule and the statement by Mr. Overman made a profound impression on the Senate. The incident involved as it did criticism on the part of Senators for action taken by the Vice President in the matter affecting the decorum of the body and the rules, was said to be without precedent in the history of the Senate.

It was evident that Vice President Marshall was angry. Democratic Senators immediately sought to avoid session by trying to divert the proceedings into another channel. There were other appeals for recognition from the chair, but they were all refused.

"Just a moment," he exclaimed. "The motion pictures were taken according to the understanding of the chair, with the consent of the Committee on Rules, not by the chair asking such consent. When the chair was requested to come in here for a great educational purpose, the chair said he had no authority over the chamber, and he sent the parties to the sergeant-at-arms, and he was informed that there was no objection to the taking of the pictures. If the chair had had the remotest idea that the Committee on Rules objected or not to taking pictures, the chair would not have been in the Senate of the United States under such circumstances."

"This matter is impugning the good faith of the Vice President of the United States. He is a football to be kicked around most of the time, but this is one instance in which he is not a football to be kicked around. The sergeant-at-arms is here. Let him answer."

Enter Sergeant-at-Arms.

The sergeant-at-arms, Charles P. Higgins, was directed by the Vice President to take his station in front of the Senate, at the left of the Vice President. The scene was most impressive. Addressing the sergeant-at-arms, Vice President Marshall said:

"Did I request you for permission to have motion pictures taken in the Senate chamber?"

"No," replied the Sergeant-at-Arms in a courteous voice.

The Sergeant-at-Arms stated to the Senate that the Vice President's secretary, Mr. Thistlewaite, had instructed him to permit the taking of the motion pictures. The Vice President inquired:

"Did Mr. Thistlewaite state to you that a gentleman had come over here to take pictures in this room?"

"He did not make any such statement," replied Sergeant-at-Arms Higgins. "He just said that you wished to have them taken."

Vice President Marshall then stated to the Senate that that was not the form later than next Saturday.

Senator Simmons, who is in charge of the measure, made a pointed appeal for Republican support by demonstrating that the measure contained virtually nothing that was not embraced in the Spanish war tax bill of 1898, that it did not contain a number of items included in the previous measure, and that many taxes were lower than in the Republican bill. Virtually the only exceptions are the taxes on wines, rectified spirits and the tax on pawnbrokers.

Conditions Are Unparalleled.

Senator Simmons declared that the conditions affecting the revenues are unparalleled. He pointed out that in the last fiscal year the dutiable imports coming into the United States amounted to $26,423,524, and that of this amount $26,373,911 came from Europe, chiefly from the countries now engaged in war, whose productive energies are now paralyzed.

The fact that our imports for September were greater than in August has been regarded by some as an indication of an early return to normal importations. But the wish is father to the thought," said Mr. Simmons. "There is no ground for it. When the war began, Europe had a large stock of goods on hand, and naturally when the lanes of ocean commerce were open they hurried them to market. It will not be long before this accumulated surplus has been disposed of, and what then? It is folly to suppose that under such conditions abroad there can be any considerable exportation of goods while the war continues."

World Jeopardized Treasury.

"Aside from the danger involved in the withdrawal of $16,000,000 now on deposit in national banks, all of which will have to be paid in gold, the situation, with the figures I have given, shows that even if this money were in the Treasury instead of in the banks the position of the Treasury would be jeopardized by fall-

SENATE WILL CUT WAR TAX DEBATE

Simmons' Appeal May Result in Adjournment by Next Saturday.

ASKS FOR QUICK ACTION

Chairman Declares that Unparalleled Financial Conditions Require Immediate Relief.

Following the introductory remarks of Senator Simmons on the war revenue bill in the Senate yesterday, it was generally conceded that debate on the measure would be brief and that the Senate would be in a position to adjourn not later than next Saturday.

Senator Simmons, who is in charge of the measure, made a pointed appeal for Republican support by demonstrating that the measure contained virtually nothing that was not embraced in the Spanish war tax bill of 1898, that it did not contain a number of items included in the previous measure, and that many taxes were lower than in the Republican bill. U. S. PLACES BLAME ON STEAMSHIP LINE

Terms Refusal to Carry American Cotton Seed Products as "Arbitrary and Unjustifiable."

After thorough investigation, State Department officials are inclined to regard the refusal of the Holland-American steamship line to accept shipments of American cotton-seed products for Holland as an arbitrary action, for which no adequate justification has yet been offered by the steamship company.

According to the understanding between this government and Great Britain, the British government has revised her contraband list so as to permit the shipment of American foodstuffs to Holland in neutral bottoms. Holland has forbidden the exportation to Germany of all sorts of foodstuffs and materials useful in war, an arrangement which assures Great Britain that shipments of foodstuffs and other articles to Holland will not ultimately be devoted to the use of the Germans. Cotton-seed products are classified as articles of conditional contraband and entitled to shipment to Holland without molestation.

Officials of the State Department are of the opinion that American cotton may be shipped to any port whatsoever, including ports of belligerents, without molestation, in the absence of any blockade. Cotton is noncontraband of war, and, therefore, is not subject to seizure if carried in a neutral bottom.

To Aid Von Kluck.

At least Germany has set free its besieging force which now can be thrown to the relief of Von Kluck. This appears to be the sole advantage gained, as Antwerp can be of little use as a port because the Scheldt, through which vessels enter from the channel, flows through Netherlands territory and the Netherlands are determined to maintain their neutrality inviolate at all costs.

It may be that the German objective has been changed and the German general staff is now intent upon annihilating a series of channel ports for the threatened attack upon England. As a Zepplin base, Antwerp might be valuable in attacking the English coast and even London, but as a naval base it would be valueless unless the Kaiser should elect to violate Dutch neutrality.
